Beauty of Design and Finish. The visitor to the Exposition who has lingered by the Asiatic porcelains, who has gone into cestacies over the fine texture, the satin smoothness, the surface sheen, the extravagance of decorative, designs, the wealth of color-of rainbow hues, and sky tints, and sea tints, as if nature herself had imparted her prismatic secret-may yet find here and there a piece or set in the European displays more satisfying to his æsthetic sense than these bewildering combinations. stance, in the display of the French firm of Haviland & Co. there was, until a week since, a tete-a-tete set in Sevres that had dared the extreme of beauty and reposed in the very realization of the ideal. It consisted of eight pieces—a salver, two cups and saucers, tea-pot, pitcher and sugar-bowl. Each piece showed in its inner surface the pink flush of the queen's couch, and on the outer the soft black shade of a velvet pansy. Held to the sun the roseate lining glowed like light dif-

used through the shadowed surface. The artistic design was after the Byzantin; conception, each piece rising from its base with sharp angles, and spreading like the lotus bloom, without curve, to the encircling edge or meeting at a positive inclination the deslope of the cover. The narrow, gilded handles rose at the same sharp angle like lines of fire, bending again to meet the upper edge, and so falling with wonderful exactness into required relation with the general contour. The only absence of this element the eye perceived the edges, but in the more certainly the exquisite possibilities of right lines. The surface decoration complet-ing this design was a golden arabesque, not running in wanton extravagance of fancy, but so barmonized and restrained as to artistic fertility positively controlled by laws

A week since a ruthless, luckless wight, A week since a ruthless, includes which, despising, with true American recklessness, the place of "hands off," grasped the pitcher. The consequence is foreseen: a chipped rim and broken fragments attest the fragiliary of the very demon ity of this treasure, and, as if the very demor of accidents had possessed the transgressor, as he endeavored to replace the ruined pitcher in its satin cushion he struck the edge of a second piece, shivering a fine sliver from its second piece, shivering a fine shiver from he golden edge. The value of each piece broken is $25. An enthusiastic collector has offered almost the market value for the pieces to place in an historical cabinet. Meanwhile an endeavor is being made to duplicate the broken pieces in the home manufactory. The lesson of this ruined beauty is that a Iready so plainly posted all over the Exposition "hands plainly posted all over the Exposition "hands off." Let us hope that most of our country-men may learn the simple fujunction without such a humiliating experience

Evenin 7. The members of the Analos'an c'ub devoted hemselves yesterday to the entertainment of their guests, the Dublin and Cambridge crews. In the morning the members of the crew started out to visit the points of interest about the city, accompanied by the Analostan Boat club committee. The Executive Mansion, Capitol and other public buildings were visited, and a general sight-seeing tour about the city made. At noon they were entertained handon New Jersey avenue, where a lunch was erved. NO ILLUMINATION. Preparations on a generous scale had been made by the Analostan club for an enjoyable and novel entertainment on the river at night It was intended to give a picule at night, and without ladies, at Table Rock, and for that purpose the boat house and Table Rock were bandsomely decorated. Extensive arrangements were made for illuminating the bank of the river at different points, and, if the weather had been pleasant, a blaze of light from a hundred tar barrels would have been reflected in the river.

Fireworks had been prepared and every-thing planned to make the fete complete, but unfortunately just as the party was about to start from the boat-house the rain began to fall and spoiled all the plans. But the whole programme, with the exception of the fireworks and tar barrels, was carried out during the early part of the night in the boat house, and the members of the club and their guests were just as merry there as they could have been at Table Rock. The new boat-house was decorated with bunting in good style. From one corner of the roof floated the British flag n honor of the guests, and from the other the Stars and Stripes.

The walls and ceiling of the club-room up stairs were covered with flags of all nations, and the Cross of St. George and the Stars of the Union were festooned together in every part of the large room. Among the guests of the club, besides the visiting crews, were Hon. A. B. Shepherd, N. B. Fugitt, esq., and a number of the Potomac boat club. During the evening many of the members of the club and some of their guests contributed to the general entertainment by singing and in other ways. The crews were wined and lunched, flowling-bowled and punched until late in the evening.

A BACKET. Before the evening at the boat-house was concluded some member of the club called out, "Let's give 'em a racket!" and they gave the racket with a vengeance. The racket is a peculiarly American institution, consisting of little song, in which the person or persons "racketed" are promisently mentioned, and ending with a wheeze and a shout and a clatter, very abruptly, like a feline concert which has been interrupted by an old boot thrown in the midst of the performers.

The main event of to-day is the regatta on the Potomac this evening, in which the visit-ing crews will take part. This morning it is probable that the guests will take a drive to the Soldiers' Home.

After this race there will be a race between crews selected from the Analostan club. One crew will consist of Messrs. White, stroke; Robertson, 3; Jones, 2, and Brown, bow. The other. Mesers. Elliott, stroke; Whiting, 3; Pastal, 2, and Hall, bow. Mr. James M. Bennett, of the Vesper club, Philadelphia, has been selected as unnits. been selected as umpire.

TO-MORROW'S PROGRAMME The visiting crews have accepted an invita-tion to take a trip down the river to-morrow, and on their return in the evening there will be a reception in their honor at the residence of Hon. A. R. Shepherd. The crews expect to leave the city Saturday or Sunday. Messrs. Dodge, Mosher, Stevens and Lyman, of the Analostan club, are the committee of the Analogian boat club to whom the care of the guests is entrusted, and they have performed their parts in a manner that will do great credit to Washington hospitality.

The crews were accompanied to this city from Philadelphia by Messrs. Alexander P. Brown and James M. Bennett, of Philadelphia, and W. P. Caldwell. Mr. Brown contributed greatly to the success of the regatta at Phila-delphia, of which he had especial charge, and e contributed greatly to the entertainment of the visiting crews in that city. Mr. Bennett, a member of the Vesper club of Philadelphia, is an enthusiastic and well-posted oarsman, and Mr. Caldwell was one of the fathers of the Analostan club, and needs no introduction to Washingtonians.

THE AVENUE COBBLESTONES. District Attorney Birney's Opinion. In rep'y to the question referred by the Disrict Commissioners to the attorney for the District, as to whether the District has the property right in the cobblestones of the paved track of the Washington and Georgetown rallroad, Mr. Birney says: "I think not. If any such right existed in the District it would have been received by it from the late corporation of Washington. But that corporation never had, to my knowledge, any property right in the payement on Pennsylvania avenue. The cobblestone pavement of Pennsylvania avenue, of which the pavement of the tracks of the railroad is a part, was originally put down in or about the year 1847. An appropriation of $16,000 for paying this avenue was made March 3, 1874. This cobblestone payement was in good repair at the date of the building of the railroad track. The charter of the rail-road company was granted in 1862, and the road was built soon after. It was laid down upon the cobblestone pavements, of which only so much was displaced as was necessary to give room to the cross-ties and tracks. The charter required the company to keep the tracks, the spaces between the tracks and two feet outside of the tracks "well paved and in good order." All subsequent repairs by the company have probably not required any appreciable addition to the cobble-stones. The act of Congress of July 8, 1870, for the paving of this avenue, section 3, provides that the cost of laying down said pavement shall be borne and paid for by the company "for that portion of the work between the tracks and a distance of two feet on each side thereof." The act gives to the company the right to construct that portion of the pavement which it is required to pay for under the direc-tion of the Commissioners, and if said company shall not construct that portion of said work with the same material, except between the rails and the tracks, and in as satisfatory a manner, and as rapidly as the residue of said work shall be constructed, then the same shall be constructed under the direc-tion of said Commissioners in the same manner as the other portion of said work. manner as the other portion of said work. The company shall have the right to select the material with which the pavement between the rails and between the tracks shall be made. I am advised that the railroad company, in making the pavement required by this law, used the cobblestones already there, and which were the property of the United States. It would be well, I think, to inquire into the truth of this. If on inquiry it should prove true, no right in the stones was inquire into the truth of this. If on inquiry it should prove true, no right in the stones was acquired by the railroad company. The material, therefore, of the pavement of the track, between the tracks and two feet outside of the same is that of the original pavement laid down under the law of Congress of 1847. It belongs to the United States, and is under

Some of the ladies in the Treasury feel naturally sensitive on account of the Paul Pry inquisitiveness of a great many of the visitors from the Centennial Exhibition who try to do Washington before they return home, but who persist that in seeing the sights they should by all means take an observation of the "Treasury girls." People should begin to understand there is no such thing as "Treasury girls." Seven eighths of the ladies employed in the Treasury Department are ladies in every sense of the word, and indignantly reput he ince of being a target for the every of the the idea of being a target for the eyes of the Centennial visitor. Arrest of a Fugitive Horse Thief. About a year ago a colored thief named Thomas Saunders, who has acquired considerable notoriety in his pursuit, was wanted badly in Frederick county, Md., for horse stealing. He was arrested in this city on a equisition from Maryland, and taken towards Frederick, but just before arriving there, while the train was moving at full speed. Tom made his escape by leaping from the platform. He was rearrested yesterday morning in this city by Officer Benton, of the Fourth precinct. The sheriff of Frederick county last evening took him to that county without a requisition. Tom consenting to go without any formalities.
